People might tolerate a boring job or long commute, but they are more prone to leave if their boss lacks integrity. Employees need to know where they stand and what to expect. Employees want a leader who practices what he or she preaches and who follows through on promises. For loyalty, there has to be a relationship that develops between employee and employer, and this develops over time through trust. Transparency, authenticity and walking the talk are essential for building trust. You can't buy employee loyalty, but you can certainly foster and nurture it by being a person of integrity. Agree?
